

San Diego State
University

What is the impact of management practices on construction worker's mental health?

We are looking for volunteers to participate in a research study, funded by the Lean Construction Institute, about the impact of management practices on construction worker's mental health. We are asking construction workers, construction equipment operators, forepersons, superintendents, project engineers, project managers and managers (safety, materials, or other management positions directly dealing with workers) to volunteer to participate in this study because they are part of the construction workforce building current projects.

During this study, you will be asked to answer an anonymous survey with questions about your background, well-being, and information about the construction project/shop/organization's management practices. Simply provide what you feel is the best answer based on your current project/job and your personal experience or opinion. The time expected to complete this survey is between 15 and 20 minutes.

The survey is available here:

English version: https://syracuseuniversity.qualtrics.com/jfe/form/SV_0uFBscVWHRSKPDo?Q_Language=EN 	Spanish version: https://syracuseuniversity.qualtrics.com/jfe/form/SV_0uFBscVWHRSKPDo?Q_Language=ES-ES
---	--

Thank you for your interest in this study,
Dr. Thais Alves (talves@sdsu.edu, San Diego State University) and Dr. Min Liu (Syracuse University, mliu92@syr.edu)